

GeoRelations and Design

Where places, spaces and people meet

<https://pixabay.com/en/delhi-road-india-chaos-282933/>

“Essentially, it’s ecopuncture, acupuncture of the Earth.” ANON

Tags:

Whole System - Whole System Design

Ecological - Architecture

Culture/Worldview - Reconnecting with Nature

Challenge:

To create spaces where holistic work can take place.

Solution:

GeoRelations and Design - where we explore and work with the relationships within specific places and spaces of different scales, from countries, regions and cities, to villages, buildings and rooms. There is also online space and our inner space.

Together, we then prepare and design these places and spaces so that they can receive the seeds of the new/ the next that wants to be planted and emerge there.

Preparing the soil is a metaphor for preparing and clear our systems to receive new ideas, insights and impulses. It also includes working with the shadows, blind spots, cleansing and unresolved conflicts.

This is a work in progress at the time of writing and will be developed in the years to come.

References:

The work is influenced by terrapsychology, the work of Arnie and Amy Mindell, land energy work, the concepts behind acupuncture and homeopathy.

Weblinks:

<http://www.terrapsych.com/whatisTP.html>

www.aamindell.net

<http://www.acupuncture.com/education/theory/acuintro.htm>

<http://www.homeopathy.com/>

Submitted by W Graham Stewart, Still Consulting / Wind Harvest International