CHALLENGE

There are things that are not public or private, but from everyone, built by the community, and there are many different types: digital, natural, urban, traditional or indigenous, etc. For example, seeds that have been exchanged and cultivated over many years, open source softwares, community work from different cultures (auzolan, tequio, Minga, etc.), etc. All these collective practices or knowledge are essential to society and to make life possible.

SOLUTION

To value these invisibles in society is key in order to build other economic reasoning and other entrepreneurial projects, collective and social, that take into account the communities that are connected to that which emerges.
