The power of prioritizing

Challenge:

Going beyond YES and NO, going beyond this one or this other alternative. When we are in a group, especially in big ones, and making decisions of multiple options, finding a way in which gather information and make a decision in a very short time is a big challenge.

Solution:

Dotmocracy is a way of naming a type of democracy in which each person has several stickers that are points (their value can be the same or not, if they're of different colours). Each person has to place the sticker in something visible for the entire group (like a wall with options or alternatives). It's different from voting in a simple way, because you have more options than just yes or no, this one or the other one, you can give weights to your different priorities (for instance placing all your stickers in only one option, or placing one sticker per option, or other combinations).
